It's simple – a portfolio of structured, focused activities that usually take place in local companies enabling students to develop the key employability skills for anyone wanting to secure employment.

The work-wise programme has been developed to provide young people, our future generation workforce, with a broad range of inspirational, industry focused, work related learning and development experiences supported by employers throughout.

Thus enabling them to better develop the personal attributes and skills, the work-wise essentials, they will need in preparation for future jobs and life.

These work-wise essentials defined by employers are:

- Work Awareness
- Work Attributes
- Work Capabilities
- Work Knowledge & Skills

work-wise helps employers by:

- Raising awareness of the industry sector and varied career opportunities
- Providing a pipeline of better prepared young people
- Allowing them to engage in a focused and structured way
- Providing a joined up approach
- Being business led which means being business friendly

“This is the first time I've ever been asked to help design something that companies will be involved in delivering. As employers we are influencing the content and are able to ensure that it meets exactly the criteria we are looking for in young people when they are applying for apprenticeships and jobs. Work-wise is simple, easy, effective and entirely designed to industry standards”

Alison Bettac, Learning and Development Manager for the UK and Europe, Firth Rixson.

work-wise helps young people and education by:

- Providing a structured work pathway based on real local industry
- Provides aspiration for work grounded in reality
- Complements learning and shows relevancy of earning to work
- Provides a creative approach to attainment
- Develop skills for jobs and life including self pride, self confidence, personal responsibility etc...
